“Vatican II: A Turning Point in the History of the Catholic Church?”

According to Pope Benedict XVI there is no reason to distinguish between the pre-conciliar and post-conciliar Church since there is a perfect continuity between the two. It is of course true that we recite the same creed, celebrate the same sacraments and are served by the same pastoral ministry. Yet what is new is the Church's openness to outsiders, their culture and their religion, as well as the emergence of an unprecedented pluralism within the Church.

Gregory Baum

Professor Emeritus at McGill University's Faculty of Religious Studies, and formerly professor of theology at St. Michael's College, Toronto. During the Second Vatican Council (1962-1965), Baum served as a peritus (expert) at the Secretariat for Christian Unity.
